About Dakota Territory Resource Corp

Dakota Territory Resource Corp maintains 100% ownership of three mineral properties located in the Black Hills of South Dakota, including the Blind Gold, City Creek and Homestake Paleoplacer Properties, all of which are located in the heart of the Homestake District and cover a total of 3,057 acres.

• Safe Low Cost Jurisdiction

The Black Hills of South Dakota is a safe low cost jurisdiction with well developed infrastructure and an existing experienced mining and exploration workforce. Opportunity and value are created for our shareholders through both the technical merits of Dakota Territory's projects and through the reduction of business risks associated with the location of our properties.

• Prolific District

In terms of US gold production, the Black Hills of South Dakota ranks second only to the Carlin District of Nevada, with more than 44 million ounces of gold produced over the past 136 years from a 100 square-mile area known as the Homestake District. Dakota Territory based the acquisition of its Black Hills property position on more than 44 years of combined mining and exploration experience in the Homestake District

• Project History

In the 1980's, Homestake Mining Company undertook a $70 million exploration program managed by Richard Bachman, president and chief executive officer of Dakota Territory that was focused primarily on the search for a repeat of the Homestake Mine. For the first time, this program successfully demonstrated the repeatability of Homestake iron-formation hosted gold deposits within a structural corridor extending northwest of the mine and proved the continuous extension of mineralized Homestake iron-formation to a distance of approximately 4 miles from the producing mine and under Dakota Territory's flagship Blind Gold Property.

• Management

The Management Team of Dakota Territory Resource Corp is a focused team of senior professionals, each with over 30 years business and finance experience. Bachman and Aberle's diverse mining and exploration background includes more than 44 combined years of experience with Homestake Mining Company in the Black Hills of South Dakota.
